Pacific Northwest Reds...

Geographically, Northern Oregon is on the same latitude as France. So it only stands to reason that Oregon would produce similar varietals and styles. The Pinot Noir grape is the primary grape used in Burgundy and dominates the Oregon wine culture as well. This delicate grape fares exceptionally well in Oregon's moderate climate. It produces bright vibrant wines that pair nicely with most food, from Pasta and Salmon to Steak.

Southern Oregon differs in climate, it is hot and dry throughout the summer. Grapes such as Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and even Zinfandel will produce quality wines in this region.

Southeastern Washington is quickly becoming the hotbed of exciting new vineyards and wineries. Its hot, dry climate makes it ideal for warm weather varietals. Wines from this area have plenty of fruit and a smooth, supple mouth feel. They can range from the big and bold to the light and subtle.

Established grapes such as Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot are consistent year after year, with new varietals like Sangiovese and Syrah coming on strong.

Try something from Oregon or Washington, you won't be disappointed!
